Olex to unveil new cables for Australian market at QME

Olex Australia will showcase a wide range of new power cables for the Australian mining industry on Stand 1060 during the 2008 Queensland Mining and Engineering (QME) exhibition at the Mackay Showground from July 22-24.

They will include:

- Buflex X'Prem reeling cable
- Boitalyon R PVC pendant overhead crane cable
- PVC flat power and control cables
- Rheyhalon cables
- Titanex HO7RN-F single and multi-core flexible cables.

The new cables will be displayed alongside Olex's current range of reeling and trailing cables.

These are designed to meet specific Australian needs in accordance with local standards.

"The quality and toughness of these products make them much sought after on world markets," Olex representative Chris Armstrong said.

"And all our products are supported by local service, advice and know-how."

Olex, a world leader in the design and manufacture of cables for mining and industry, has had more than 65 years experience in cable production in Australia. As well as the mining industry, its products have applications in industrial, commercial and domestic environments.

Since its 2006 acquisition by the world's leading cable company, Nexans, Olex says it is even better positioned to provide the Australian mining industry with high quality cables and expertise.
