Commerce Queensland to offer training tailored to meet the needs of miners at QME

Commerce Queensland will shine the spotlight on training services on Stand 6015.4 during the 2008 Queensland Mining and Engineering (QME) exhibition at the Mackay Showground from July 22-24.

Commerce Queensland specialises in training courses specifically tailored to meet the needs of the mining sector and ensure businesses are compliant with relevant legislation.

It points out that legislative requirements throughout Australia dictate a minimum standard for all business practices, and it is essential people know their obligations as a manager, contractor or employee, to protect themselves and their business against liability.

Commerce Queensland provides fast and convenient compliance training, both online and face-to-face. Its experienced trainers can help reduce risk, improve confidence and trust and ultimately, a company's reputation.

As well as training services, it offers a range of other business benefits and solutions.

Membership offers information, consultancy services and industry best practice, as well as allowing companies to take advantage of associating with the organisation.

Not only does it lobby government for the best possible conditions for Queensland businesses, it also offers a range of services including:

- workplace relations and employment advice
- vocational education and training
- eco-efficiency advice
- workplace health and safety
- international business services
- human resource management
- bottom-line savings on telecommunications, fuel and more.

Other services include advice on knowing how to reduce exposure to risk, understanding current workplace health and safety (WHS) obligations, ensuring employment contracts and agreements are compliant with the legislation, ensuring organisations have the appropriate staffing structure to meet organisational goals, and knowing which training is right to help with retaining staff.
