Vision Safe launching new safety products at QME

Vision Safe will showcase two of its new safety products – covering the latest lighting technology and personal protective equipment – on Stand 8037 during the 2008 Queensland Mining and Engineering (QME) exhibition at the Mackay Showground from July 22-24.

Foxfire, described as the latest in LED portable warning light technology, is a heavy-duty, magnetic backed portable signal light with 26 super-bright LEDs.

Each LED has a specially designed magnifier to increase light intensity, with a unique arrangement of the LEDs allowing light to be projected from the sides, as well as to the front, making it visible from most directions.

According to Vision Safe, the light emitted from Foxfire is so strong that it can be placed inside an ordinary traffic cone, lighting the entire cone rather than just the tip, to make the cone visible at a greater distance, thereby increasing safety in coned areas.

Foxfire is powered by four AA batteries, operates in either static (constant on) or flash mode and is available in red and amber.

Vision Safe will also be displaying its Glove Guard and Utility Guard, which now come in two new colours – fluoro yellow and fluoro lime.

These new colours align with workplace safety strategies that focus on worker visibility. Although only small, the more visible colours of the Glove Guard and Utility Guard help make workers more obvious in the workplace.

In addition, soft pouch bags with either the glove guard end or utility guard end are available in fluoro colours. Made from tough neoprene with an adjustable drawstring, these handy bags are available in ultra bright fluoro orange, yellow and green.

Today, Vision Safe is a recognised name in the safety supplies industry. It now also offers a variety of high powered LED safety lights, rotary beacons and has recently improved the back support belts and protective knee pads in their range.
