RSEA introduces Amoveo transportable buildings at QME

RSEA will display a transportable modular office on Stand 9183 during the 2008 Queensland Mining and Engineering (QME) exhibition at the Mackay Showground from July 22-24.

RSEA's business is safety and while they have 45,000 safety products currently available, they continue to develop their product range to meet customer requirements.

RSEA has recently added Amoveo's modular buildings, designed for mine and construction site applications, to its comprehensive range of site facilities.

Along with the transportable office, RSEA will have safety specialists on hand to answer questions and provide quotes. Further, RSEA and Amoveo are offering QME customers a free HTC dual touch phone or free corporate branding with purchases made before August 31, 2008.

Amoveo units:

- have a robust steel structure
- are specifically designed for the Australian market
- are cost effective to transport
- are quick to install
- are easy to maintain.

Amoveo's Modular Office collapses for transport so four units fit into the space of one, plus it has removable walls if larger open space is needed.

As well as the modular office, RSEA's Amoveo range includes a Hinged Site Office and an Expandable Office.

The site office can be assembled in less than an hour and its patented hinging mechanism automatically installs the side walls as the roof is lifted into place.

The Expandable Office is a fully transportable building for up to 10 people.
